FUND MANAGER'S COMMENTARY

- In the third quarter of 2024 (3Q2024), Malaysia's real GDP grew by 5.3%, easing from the 5.9% growth recorded in the previous quarter, according to the Department of Statistics Malaysia (DOSM). The growth was primarily driven by the services sector, which contributed 3.0 percentage points, while the manufacturing sector achieved its highest share since March 2022, accounting for 25% of total growth. The mining and quarrying sector was the only major industry to experience a contraction.
- We anticipate continued market volatility in the near term, driven by escalating geopolitical tensions in the Middle East. Although the Japanese yen has weakened, there is sentiment for potential further gains, partly due to recent hawkish remarks by Bank of Japan Governor Kazuo Ueda, who has maintained the interest rate at 0.25%.
- China's recently announced stimulus package has led to a short-term outflow of foreign funds from Bursa Malaysia; however, we view this as a temporary reaction. Should the stimulus measures effectively strengthen China's economy, this could ultimately bolster global trade and benefit Malaysian producers.
- Despite the current market turbulence, we retain a bullish stance on Malaysian equities. Our valuation analysis indicates that the market remains undervalued relative to historical earnings and book value multiples.
